THE FORTIETH DOOR

Chapter Two
"Two Locketts"

Returning home from the ball, Aimee is told that she must marry Hamid Bey within the week. She is horrified but helpless, and returns to the gate in the garden wall to bid good-bye to Jack Ryder forever. At the tomb in the desert Jack is visited by a Frenchman seeking news of the heir to the Delcarte fortune. Paul Delcarte, with his wife and baby daughter, disappeared in the desert fifteen years previous. Later Jack finds among the siftings in the tomb a locket containing a picture that is the image of Aimee. Convinced that the girl he loves is French and not Mohammedan, he hurries to Cairo, but on the way is beset by two men in the employ of Hamid Bey, who attack the unarmed American with sabres.
